

CITY FOOD WORKSHOP

COMPARATIVE STUDY OF STREET VENDING ACROSS TIME AND PLACE

11.28.18 - 11.30.18

The 2018 City Food workshop focuses on questions of law, livelihood and liveliness in the Global North and Global South. Using historical and comparative methods, this forum brings together studies of the past, present and projected futures of street food vending.

New York University

Washington Square Campus Department of Nutrition and Food Studies

Supported by the Provost's Global Seed Grants for Collaborative Research and the Department of Nutrition and Food Studies at NYU Steinhardt.

- LOGISTICS -

City Food brings together scholars, teachers, curators, public historians and advocates who are dedicated to the study of food in the city. It was launched in 2014 as a collaboration between New York University and the University of Toronto. The 2018 workshop is the second in a two-part series on street food vending and social equity across the Global North / South. The primary funding for this event comes from NYU's Office of the Provost, which supports the integration of NYU's global campuses through collaborations in research and teaching. Planned outcomes include peer-reviewed publications and a digital humanities initiative.

Please refer to the website (http://cityfoodresearch.org/) for more information about the collaboration, for examples of past research and events, and for participant bios.

Workshop Paper Sessions Format

This workshop welcomes returning participants and new contributors from around the world. Five paper sessions feature a total of 18 papers, with commentaries. Many presentations introduce new research-in-progress, and they are based on extended abstracts. Others expand on projects from our last workshop; these are based on revised full papers and are indicated on the schedule with an asterisk.* All of the workshop materials are available to registered participants for pre-reading. Please review them in advance.

Presenters:

- TIME: Please take 10-15 minutes to introduce your research and elaborate on your written submission. (Note that 15 minutes will be the upper maximum for the presentation itself so as to preserve as much time for discussion as possible.)
- TECH: A laptop and projector will be available onsite. If you are using A/V, please email your powerpoint presentation (or other media) to <jackie.rohel@nyu.edu> by November 28.

Commentators:

 There are 1-2 commentators per paper session. Each commentator should take 5-7 minutes after the session's presentations to outline a few questions and connections between the papers, offer some feedback and launch the group discussion.

Please note that Thursday's introductory comments by Krishnendu Ray and Friday's closing comments by Amita Baviskar and Joseph Heathcott will be recorded.

The workshop planning team would like to acknowledge and thank a number of people for their efforts in making this event possible: Lourdes Castro, Steven Ho, Stephanie Jolly and Pamela Stewart in the Department of Nutrition and Food Studies for administrative and catering support; Rania Memiche and the Institute for Public Knowledge for poster design; Jennifer Infante for coordinating video production; and Melissa Beuoy and NYU's Scholarship and Data Services teams for designing Friday's special session on digital humanities for City Food researchers.
